

This is Australia's most suppressed story about an innocent man, a boxer, who stands up to the most villainous Boxing Trainer and Promoter, while also fighting back against corrupt cops and a federal politician. This ordeal of injustice has gone on for ten years for The Hobo, even though he keeps falling victim to more harm because these corrupt villains want to shut him up. Fed up of getting no pay for sparring, televised fights, hotels or travel like other fighters, The Hobo, writes his memoirs. While showing the boxing fraternity his manuscript and films, including details of him having seizures, the villainous promoter realizes he underestimated The Hobo and king-hits him in front of everyone, also threatening to get him if he publishes any of his work. After all the hell Noctor's been put through concerning his book Coward Punch Corruption, The nefarious Promoter attempted to have him slaughtered yet again. These top Australian vultures then begin a campaign to make a fortune out of the Coward Punch by using their own, famous hypocritical Fad Fighter on TV.
